

Chapter 10 — Vibhūti Yoga

విభూత్యోగ: : విభూత్యోగము

"The Yoga of Divine Glories" · 42 verses · Seeing God in everything excellent

In Chapter 10, the Lord turns His teaching into poetry. Arjuna asks: "Tell me Your divine glories in detail — for I am not satisfied; the more I hear, the more I want to hear." Kṛṣṇa responds with a breathtaking list: wherever you encounter beauty, power, brilliance, or excellence — that is a spark of Me. This chapter is the Gītā's theology of beauty: every excellent thing in the world is a window onto the Divine.

□ Essential verses of Chapter 10

The Gītā's invitation to see God in every excellence.

□ Essential take-away of Chapter 10

The world is shot through with divinity — learn to see it.

Of mountains, He is Meru. Of rivers, the Gaṅgā. Of letters, the syllable A. Of trees, the āśvattha. Of horses, Uccaiṣravas. Of weapons, the thunderbolt. The list goes on for thirty-five verses — not to exhaust the catalogue, but to train the eye.

"Every excellent thing you have ever loved was already a glimpse of the Divine."
